

ARIZONA'S WORKFORCE

A press release from the Arizona Dept. Of Economic Security, Research Administration

January 22, 2004

Arizona's Unemployment Rate Holds Steady at 4.8 Percent as December's Economy Adds Nearly 9,000 Nonfarm Jobs

Benchmarked nonfarm employment figures will be available with the next press release on March 4, 2004. These figures taken from the establishment survey will be updated for the years 2003 and 2002. Updated household survey figures will be released for the years 2000 through 2003 later in 2004.

Arizona's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate showed no change in December, holding steady at 4.8 percent. Once again, Arizona experienced a contraction of its labor force.

Meanwhile, the national jobless rate declined to 5.7 percent, down slightly from 5.9 percent in November.

Arizona's economy grew with an addition of 8,900 nonfarm jobs in December. While this monthly increase was below the 10-year average, it represented the best December increase since 2000. In December 2002, Arizona showed an over-the-month loss of more than 5,000 jobs.

Private industry accounted for more than 93 percent of the December increase. The goods-producing industry cluster showed a loss of 1,000 jobs, whereas the service-providing industries added 9,900.

Trade dominated the figures for December by adding 6,000 jobs--accounting for 67 percent of the total monthly increase. Wholesale added 900 jobs and retail added 5,100. Clothing and general merchandise stores added 2,600 jobs in December. While this growth appears only slightly below its 10-year average, increases in October and November were well above average. In particular, these recent increases were largely due to the improving trends in department stores, which added 1,500 jobs in December. With the exception of motor vehicle and parts dealers (-400 jobs), other retail gains were widespread and were especially robust in sectors that catered to home furnishings, remodeling and improvement.

The transportation, warehousing, and utilities group showed an increase of 100 jobs. Air transportation (-100 jobs) pared jobs each month of the fourth quarter 2003. Meanwhile truck transportation showed no change and utilities lost 100 jobs in December, with each showing no growth in the fourth quarter of 2003.

Financial activities (+1,300 jobs) showed widespread gains in December. Finance and insurance (+800 jobs) showed its largest monthly gain of the year, and notably the same applied to real estate, rental and leasing (+500 jobs). Much of the gains in this varied industry group support the growth of Arizona's communities, in both housing and business.

Construction declined by 1,300 jobs in December, the first monthly decline for this industry since January. Losses were widespread across all sectors.

Natural resources and mining showed no change in December.

Once again, manufacturing pushed forward with an increase of 300 jobs, matching the increase in November. Durable goods manufacturing added 200 jobs and nondurable goods manufacturing jobs rose by 100. Notably, while manufacturing showed some growth in the final quarter of 2003 and a general recovery is underway, this sharply reduced workforce of 174,700 compares to 1993 levels.

Professional and business services added 700 jobs, nearly breaking even from the loss of 800 in November. The increase of 1,600 professional, scientific and technical jobs largely offset the losses in the administrative, support, and waste group. Among this group, the gain of 100 jobs in employment services did not compensate for the loss of 1,600 jobs in November. Meanwhile, management of companies had a small gain of 100, and overall fourth quarter growth for this sector was relatively strong.

Information services grew by 400 jobs in December. This supported job growth in each month of the final quarter 2003 and provides a substantial amount of improvement in its long recovery phase. Nevertheless, it continued to struggle to recuperate from previous losses.

With well-above average increases reported in October and November, leisure and hospitality had an average gain in December with an addition of 600 jobs. While arts, entertainment and recreation pared 100, accommodation and food services employment rose by 700.

Educational and health services ended the year with a loss of 100 jobs. Educational services showed a loss of 700 as staffing levels dropped due to the holidays. Meanwhile, healthcare and social assistance added 600 jobs, stemming from widespread gains across most sectors. The only exception was a loss of jobs in the ambulatory health care services sector.

In conclusion, Arizona's economy showed continued improvement in December. Arizona's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate held steady at 4.8 percent. Additionally, considering the three-month preparation for the holidays, trade businesses hired more than they had since 2000. Even leisure and hospitality did well during this period with an increase in jobs. With 388,800 jobs, trade employment reached a record in December. Manufacturing ended the year with three consecutive months of increases. Despite recent gains, this industry has a long road to recovery. Financial services showed particular strength in December as it provided support to businesses and consumers during the holidays while also benefiting from the strength in Arizona's housing market.
